As we draw close, the scent of the sea fills our noses. Abuelo's mouth lifts.
Abuelo misses the sun, I think. I watch him push stray silver strands off his forehead. Does he wish he were back there? On the island where he was born?
I find Abuelo's hand. My palm, now a bit bigger, fits more snugly inside his.
"My papi took me to the beach during huracanes," Abuelo says. "He taught me to listen." Abuelo's fingers tighten around mine.
